Overview	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Extensive experience in disaster recovery, community economic development, and resilience planning. • Primary areas of interest include: urban change; gentrification; commercial fisheries management, economic development, Indigenous community planning; disaster recovery planning, oil spills. • Significant work in First Nations communities, immigrant communities, and developing countries.
Education	Doctor of Philosophy (ABD), Urban Planning, University of British Columbia 2012 - Present Research Focus – Urban change, gentrification, disaster recovery justice. Dissertation – The New Louisiana Purchase: Gentrification and Disaster in the Heart of New Orleans Dissertation Overview – Community-based, participatory study of gentrification in the Central City neighborhood of New Orleans. Uses a multi-media approach (80 qualitative interviews, documentary filming, and community organizing) to analyze the impacts of post-disaster recovery planning on increasing gentrification. The theme of disaster recovery justice is explored with an emphasis on how planners do or do not mitigate the unintended consequences of recovery. This study also pursues public scholarship objectives of knowledge mobilization and influencing local policies. Master of Public Administration, New York University 2006 Academic Focus – Non-profit management, international economic development, microfinance. Capstone – Evaluation of Cambodia's Public Financial Management Reform Program: A Report Provided to the World Bank and the Royal Government of Cambodia. Bachelor of Arts, Anthropology, Reed College 1999 Academic Focus – Cargo cults and the role of religion in economic development in the South Pacific. Thesis – The Fall of the Cassowary: Ethnicity, Morality, and Anthropological Understanding in West New Britain
