

CURRICULUM VITAE
David M. Abramson, Ph.D. M.P.H.

Date Revised:

March 30, 2016

ACADEMIC INTERESTS:

Academic interest areas include disaster research; socio-ecological models of health and resilience; public health systems research; community engagement policy and practice; and advocacy coalition framework theory. Areas of specialized expertise include social and behavioral aspects of disaster impact and recovery; public health emergency response systems; risk communication; HIV/AIDS politics and systems of care; inter-organizational networks, joint ventures and collaborations; evaluation research; observational cohort design and implementation; and research field methods.

ACADEMIC TRAINING:

1981	B.A., English (High Honors) Queens College, New York, NY
1992	M.P.H. , Sociomedical Sciences Columbia University, New York, NY
2005	Ph.D., Sociomedical Sciences/Political Science Columbia University, New York, NY

Dissertation: The Rules of Engagement – How Federal AIDS Policy Shaped Community Participation, and Was Shaped By It. Committee: Ronald Bayer (sponsor), Peter Messeri (chair), Michael Sparer, James Morone (Brown University), Ester Fuchs.

HONORS & AWARDS:

1981	Queens College, English Department High Honors, Cum laude
1989	Nyack Hospital Paramedic Program Valedictorian
1993	Columbia University School of Public Health Alumni Association Scholarship Award
2002	Eugene Litwak Prize for best doctoral dissertation proposal, Mailman School of Public Health
2003	Columbia University Alumni Association Scholarship

05/01/2014 -- 09/30/2016

The Sandy Child and Family Health Study (S-CAFH)

Total grant amount: $1.2 million

The goal of this project, funded through the New Jersey Department Health using federal SSBG funds, is to assess the needs and disaster recovery status of 1,000 randomly-sampled New Jersey residents exposed to Hurricane Sandy, with a particular focus on such vulnerable groups as children, seniors, and economically-disadvantaged individuals.

Role: Co-Principal Investigator, Effort: 15% FTE

BRAF CU13-0598 (Baton Rouge Area Foundation)

02/01/2013 – 6/30/2016

The Gulf Coast Children's Initiative

Total grant amount: $2.1 million

The goals of this project are to (a) monitor the well-being of children through a continuation of the Gulf Coast Population Impact Project; and (b) begin to address children's and community needs with innovative programming through Project SHORE-Line, a youth empowerment effort.

Role: Co-Principal Investigator, Effort: 4% FTE

1U01ES021497 (NIEHS), Trapido (PI)

04/01/2011 – 04/30/2016

The Women and Their Children's Health Gulf Consortium (WaTCH)

Total grant amount: $3.4 million

The goal of these two companion studies is to use two longitudinal cohorts, one of 2,500 women and the other of 800 of their sampled children, to examine the long-term physical and mental health impacts of the Deepwater Horizon oil spill, predicated on an ecological bio-behavioral framework of the mediating aspects of stress on health.

Role: Co-Investigator (Local Principal Investigator of Child Impact Study), Effort: 17% FTE

09/01/2015 – 07/31/2020

Katrina@10: Demographic and Health Disparities in Recovery from Hurricane Katrina.

Total grant amount: $6.7 million

The overall objective of this Program (P01) is to advance disaster science by including both breadth and depth in a set of studies that includes three especially-affected populations and two representative analyses of the enduring effects of Hurricane Katrina; by providing a temporal perspective with longitudinal data that highlight differentials in recovery across diverse populations over a decade; by capitalizing upon the trust and collaboration that has been established and nurtured between our research teams and our communities of interest over many years; and by employing a unifying theoretical framework developed by one of our team's leaders.

Role: Multi Principal Investigator, Effort: 20% FTE

Pending Research Support

The Sandy Child and Family Health Study -- DCF Supplement

01/01/2016 – 06/30/2017

New Jersey Department of Children and Families (SSBG Sandy Supplemental)

Total grant funds requested: $630,000

The goal of this supplement to the Sandy Child and Family health Study, as funded through the New Jersey Department of Children and Families, is to extend the analyses begun in the original Sandy Child and Family health Study, disseminate the findings to a broad range of stakeholders, and to conduct a Child Impact Study.

Role: Co-Principal Investigator. Effort: 15% FTE

SHOREline NOAA Youth Resiliency Project

10/01/2016 – 09/30/2019

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration

Total grant funds requested: $477,000

The goal of this project is to refine the SHOREline project-based learning high school curriculum to enhance environmental literacy and promote individual and communal resiliency to natural hazard events.

Role: Principal Investigator, Effort: 5%

Zika Risk Salience and Evolving Risk Communication Challenge

4/1/2016 – 3/31/2017

National Science Foundation

Total grant funds requested: $198,000

This research will use a representative national sample to examine how various social, scientific, and policy cues influence the US public's appreciation of the risk of the Zika virus over time, as well as the public's receptivity to various clinical, environmental, and behavioral interventions.

Role: Principal Investigator, Effort: 4.8%

Zika Women's Panel Study

4/1/2016 – 3/31/2017

Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

Total grant funds requested: $77,000

This research will use a panel study of women of child-bearing age to examine how various social, scientific, and policy cues influence the individual appreciation of the risk of the Zika virus over time among a high-risk population, as well as individual receptivity to various clinical, environmental, and behavioral interventions.

Role: Principal Investigator, Effort: 10%

09/30/2013-09/29/2015

Centers for Disease Control / New York Medical College

Total grant funds: $256,859

Impact of Health Department Worker Safety Training on Health Impacts after Sandy. An evaluation of New York's mold mitigation training program for homeowners, residents, and volunteers.

Role: Co-Investigator

1 U01 TP000589-01 (Chandler)

09/30/2013-09/29/2015

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention / Columbia University

Total grant funds: $248,844

The goals of this study (Evaluation of Public Health Systems Response to Hurricane Sandy in the NYC Area) funded by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) are threefold: (1) to focus on Hurricane Sandy's effects on two local public health agencies as a way of understanding how complex organizations function during times of extreme duress; (2) to determine how public health workers can improve upon their disaster response and recovery strategies, particularly when working on new disaster-related job tasks; and (3) to identify and then implement new face-to-face and online trainings that address current communication and logistical barriers.

Role: Co-Investigator
